1. Purpose

The purpose of this Attendance Policy is to establish consistent requirements for recording working time, reporting attendance, managing lateness and absence, and maintaining reliable workforce availability at TechNova Solutions Pvt. Ltd. (“TechNova” or “the Company”).

The policy supports accurate workforce records, effective team planning, customer commitments, payroll administration, and fair application of attendance expectations.

2. Scope

This policy applies to eligible TechNova employees unless a written employment arrangement, shift assignment, or applicable requirement provides otherwise.

Interns, trainees, contractors, consultants, and other non-employee personnel may follow separate attendance arrangements established by their program or contract.

3. Standard Working Schedule

The standard full-time schedule is 40 hours per week, normally distributed across five working days.

Item	Standard Arrangement
Working Days	Monday to Friday
Typical Working Hours	9:00 AM – 6:00 PM
Standard Weekly Hours	40 hours
Meal / Break Period	One-hour standard break within the working day
Work Location	Office, remote, or hybrid according to role and approved arrangement

Actual schedules may differ for shift-based roles, customer support, operational requirements, time-zone coverage, business travel, or approved flexible arrangements.

4. Attendance Principles

- Employees are expected to be available during their assigned working hours.

- Employees must record attendance accurately using the designated Company system.
- Employees must notify their manager promptly when they cannot attend work as scheduled.
- Attendance records must reflect actual working arrangements and approved leave.
- Employees must not ask another person to record attendance on their behalf.
- Managers are expected to apply attendance requirements consistently and reasonably.
- Approved leave is not treated as unauthorized absence.

5. Attendance Recording

TechNova may use an HR information system, attendance portal, approved timekeeping application, access-control records, or another designated mechanism to record attendance.

Employees are responsible for ensuring that required attendance entries are completed accurately.

5.1 Daily Recording

Where the assigned system requires daily check-in and check-out, employees should record both events on the relevant working day. Employees working under a system that automatically records attendance remain responsible for reviewing exceptions and reporting errors.

5.2 Remote Employees

Employees working remotely must follow the attendance and availability requirements applicable to their approved remote arrangement. Remote status does not remove the obligation to remain available during agreed working hours.

6. Punctuality

Employees are expected to begin work at their scheduled start time and remain available for the required working period.

Occasional unavoidable delays should be communicated promptly. Repeated or unexplained lateness may be reviewed by the manager and HR.

7. Late Arrival

An employee who expects to arrive after the scheduled start time should notify the manager or designated team contact as soon as reasonably possible.

The notification should normally include the expected arrival time and, where appropriate, whether the employee's work or meetings will be affected.

7.1 Repeated Lateness

A pattern of repeated lateness may result in a manager discussion, documented counseling, attendance improvement expectations, or further action under the disciplinary process.

7.2 Significant Delay

Where an employee expects a substantial delay, the manager may determine whether the employee should work remotely, use available leave, adjust the working schedule, or follow another approved arrangement, subject to business requirements.

8. Early Departure

Employees should obtain appropriate manager approval before leaving work before the end of their scheduled working period, except in an emergency.

Unexpected early departure due to illness or an emergency should be reported as soon as reasonably practicable.

9. Absence

An employee who cannot attend work must notify the manager or designated contact as soon as reasonably possible.

Where the absence is covered by leave, the employee must submit or regularize the corresponding leave request through the approved process.

9.1 Unplanned Absence

- Notify the manager or designated contact promptly.
- Provide an expected return date where known.
- Submit the applicable leave request when practicable.
- Maintain reasonable communication if the absence continues.
- Provide required documentation where applicable.

10. Unauthorized Absence

An absence may be considered unauthorized when an employee is absent without approved leave or without following the required notification process and no reasonable explanation is provided.

Unauthorized absence may affect attendance records and may be reviewed under the Company's corrective or disciplinary procedures.

Before disciplinary action is taken, the Company may seek an explanation and review relevant circumstances and records.

11. Attendance During Leave

Employees recorded as being on approved leave should not normally perform routine work during the leave period.

If business circumstances require an employee to return temporarily, the manager and employee should coordinate with HR so that attendance and leave records remain accurate.

12. Flexible Working Hours

Certain employees may be approved for flexible schedules. A flexible schedule must specify expected availability, core collaboration periods where applicable, and any team or customer requirements.

Flexible working is subject to the Employee Handbook and Work From Home Policy and may be reviewed when business requirements change.

13. Shift Employees

Employees assigned to shifts must follow the schedule communicated by their department.

- Shift swaps require prior approval unless the department has an approved self-service process.
- Employees must report for the assigned shift on time.
- Failure to attend a scheduled shift without proper notice may be treated as an attendance issue.
- Shift-specific attendance rules may be documented by the responsible department.

14. Meetings and Availability

Attendance at required meetings, training sessions, customer calls, and scheduled team activities is part of normal work responsibilities.

Employees who cannot attend a required activity should notify the organizer or manager and provide an appropriate explanation where necessary.

15. Attendance and Leave System

The HR system is the primary administrative record for approved leave and attendance exceptions where configured for that purpose.

Employees should review their attendance record periodically and report apparent discrepancies rather than waiting until the end of the leave year.

16. Attendance Regularization

If an employee fails to record attendance because of a technical issue, approved work arrangement, forgotten entry, or another legitimate reason, the employee should submit a regularization request through the designated process.

Regularization requests should normally be submitted within five working days of the affected date.

Managers may approve or reject requests based on available evidence and the circumstances of the case.

Repeated regularization requests may be reviewed to determine whether additional training or corrective action is appropriate.

17. System or Connectivity Failure

If an attendance system is unavailable, employees should notify their manager or designated support channel when practical and retain reasonable evidence of the issue.

The Company may use alternative records such as approved work logs, system records, manager confirmation, or support tickets to correct attendance data.

18. Business Travel

Employees traveling on approved Company business should follow the attendance procedure applicable to their assignment. Travel days, customer-site work, and working days away from the normal office may require manual attendance or manager confirmation.

19. Remote Work Attendance

- Employees must maintain agreed availability during scheduled hours.
- Employees should remain reachable through approved communication channels.
- Employees must promptly communicate connectivity or power interruptions that materially affect availability.
- Remote work does not permit an employee to be unavailable without approval.
- Employees must comply with information-security requirements while working remotely.

20. Manager Responsibilities

- Communicate team schedules and expected availability.
- Review attendance exceptions promptly.
- Address repeated lateness or absence fairly and consistently.
- Protect confidential information concerning employee circumstances.
- Coordinate with HR for extended, repeated, or sensitive attendance issues.
- Ensure approved leave and attendance records are not knowingly misrepresented.

21. Employee Responsibilities

- Attend work according to the assigned schedule.

- Record attendance accurately.
- Notify the manager promptly about unexpected absence or delay.
- Submit leave and regularization requests within required timeframes.
- Maintain reasonable communication during extended absence.
- Return to work on the expected date or communicate changes promptly.

22. Attendance Monitoring

HR and authorized managers may review attendance records for legitimate purposes including workforce planning, payroll administration, leave administration, operational management, and identification of recurring attendance issues.

Access to attendance information should be limited to individuals with a legitimate business need.

23. Privacy and Confidentiality

Attendance information is an employee record and should be handled appropriately. Information concerning medical, family, or other sensitive reasons for absence should be shared only through designated channels and with individuals who need the information for legitimate business purposes.

24. Exceptions

Exceptions to attendance requirements may be approved by an authorized manager or HR representative where permitted by Company policy. Emergency circumstances should be considered reasonably.

An exception for one employee does not automatically create an entitlement for another employee.

25. Attendance Misconduct

Potential attendance misconduct may include falsifying attendance records, recording attendance for another person, deliberately misrepresenting working time, repeated unauthorized absence, or knowingly providing false information in an attendance regularization request.

Potential misconduct may be investigated and handled under the Company's disciplinary process.

26. Corrective and Disciplinary Action

Depending on the circumstances, attendance concerns may be addressed through coaching, counseling, documented expectations, attendance improvement measures, formal warnings, or other disciplinary action.

The Company may consider the frequency, duration, impact, employee explanation, prior discussions, and relevant circumstances before deciding on appropriate action.

27. Return to Work

Employees returning from extended absence should communicate their return as required and complete any applicable HR or manager process.

For certain extended absences, HR and the manager may establish a reasonable return-to-work plan.

28. Record Retention

Attendance and leave records will be retained according to applicable Company record-retention requirements. Employees should not alter or delete official attendance records outside authorized procedures.
