1. Purpose

This Employee Exit Policy establishes the standard process for employees leaving TechNova Solutions Pvt. Ltd. (“TechNova” or “the Company”). It provides a structured approach for resignation, notice periods, approvals, knowledge transfer, return of Company property, access closure, final settlement, benefits, records, and other exit activities.

The objective is to ensure that employee exits are handled professionally, consistently, securely, and with appropriate continuity of business operations.

2. Scope

This policy applies to employees leaving TechNova through resignation, retirement, completion of an employment arrangement, termination, redundancy, or another authorized separation process.

Certain exit requirements may differ according to employment terms, role, location, applicable law, or the circumstances of separation.

3. Exit Principles

- Treat departing employees professionally and respectfully.
- Complete required exit activities in a timely manner.
- Protect Company information and assets throughout the exit process.
- Maintain appropriate business continuity and knowledge transfer.
- Close or modify access according to the employee's final authorization.
- Process final employment and benefit matters according to applicable requirements.
- Maintain appropriate confidentiality of employee and Company information.

4. Types of Separation

- Voluntary resignation
- Retirement
- Company-initiated termination

- Redundancy or organizational restructuring
- Completion of a fixed-term or other defined employment arrangement
- Other separation approved under Company procedures

5. Voluntary Resignation

An employee who wishes to resign should submit a formal resignation through the Company's approved process or to the appropriate manager and HR representative.

The resignation should clearly state the employee's intention to leave and should be submitted in accordance with the employee's applicable employment terms.

6. Resignation Acknowledgement

HR or the authorized manager should acknowledge receipt of the resignation and coordinate the applicable exit process.

The Company may confirm the proposed last working day after considering the applicable notice requirement, approved leave, transition needs, and other relevant factors.

7. Notice Period

Employees are expected to comply with the notice period specified in their employment terms or applicable requirements.

- The notice period begins according to the Company's accepted resignation process and applicable employment terms.
- Employees should continue to perform their responsibilities during the notice period.
- Leave during the notice period remains subject to applicable leave and manager approval requirements.
- Any waiver, reduction, or adjustment of notice must be authorized by the appropriate Company authority.

8. Notice Period Waiver or Early Release

TechNova may approve an early release or notice-period adjustment based on business requirements and applicable employment terms.

Any approved arrangement should be documented by HR or another authorized function.

9. Last Working Day

The last working day is the final scheduled working day recognized by the Company unless another date is formally approved.

The employee should complete required handover, asset return, access, documentation, and other exit activities before or by the last working day as directed.

10. Manager Exit Responsibilities

- Confirm transition priorities and critical responsibilities.
- Identify work requiring handover.
- Arrange knowledge-transfer activities.
- Identify documents, repositories, systems, and business contacts requiring transition.
- Coordinate access changes with IT and relevant system owners.
- Confirm return of Company property.
- Provide required information to HR for the exit process.

11. Knowledge Transfer

Employees should provide reasonable knowledge transfer before departure, particularly where they own critical processes, projects, customer relationships, systems, or operational responsibilities.

11.1 Handover May Include

- Current projects and status
- Upcoming deadlines
- Open issues and risks
- Key contacts
- Relevant documentation
- Operational procedures
- System or application responsibilities
- Pending approvals or decisions
- Known dependencies

12. Exit Handover Documentation

Where appropriate, the manager may use a formal handover checklist or document to record responsibilities transferred, outstanding items, and the person receiving ownership.

13. Company Property

Employees must return Company property assigned to them before separation, unless HR or an authorized function provides different instructions.

- Laptop, desktop, monitor, or other computing equipment
- Mobile devices and accessories
- Security badges, access cards, keys, or tokens
- Storage media
- Company documents and records
- Tools, equipment, or other assigned assets
- Other property belonging to TechNova

14. Asset Verification

IT, Administration, Finance, or other responsible functions may verify returned assets and their condition.

Missing or damaged Company property may be handled according to applicable Company procedures and employment terms.

15. Information and Document Return

Employees must return or transfer Company information and records in their possession or control.

- Business documents
- Customer or partner records
- Project files
- Source code or technical materials
- Company correspondence
- Credentials or authentication devices

- Physical records

16. Personal Copies of Company Information

Employees must not retain unauthorized personal copies of Company confidential, proprietary, customer, employee, financial, technical, or other protected information after separation.

Company information stored on approved systems should remain within those systems or be transferred to the authorized owner.

17. System and Application Access

Access should be reviewed and revoked or modified as appropriate when an employee leaves the Company.

- Email and collaboration accounts
- Enterprise applications
- File repositories
- Source-code repositories
- Cloud services
- VPN or remote-access services
- Databases and internal systems
- Enterprise knowledge systems

18. Access Timing

The timing of access revocation depends on the circumstances of separation and security requirements. For planned departures, access should be closed in coordination with HR and IT. For involuntary or high-risk separations, access may be revoked immediately or at another authorized time.

19. Confidentiality After Exit

Confidentiality obligations do not automatically end when employment ends. Former employees must continue to protect information that remains confidential under applicable agreements, policies, or law.

20. Intellectual Property After Exit

Employees remain subject to applicable intellectual-property obligations concerning Company work product, source code, inventions, documentation, and other protected materials created or obtained during employment.

21. Final Salary and Settlement

Finance and HR will process final employment-related payments and adjustments according to applicable Company procedures, employment terms, and legal requirements.

The final settlement may include applicable salary, approved reimbursements, leave-related amounts, deductions, recoveries, or other authorized items.

22. Leave Balance at Exit

Treatment of unused leave at separation depends on the applicable Leave Policy, employment terms, and legal requirements.

Any eligible payment or adjustment will be determined through the applicable payroll and HR process.

23. Expense Claims

Employees should submit outstanding business expense claims before separation or within the timeframe communicated by Finance.

Claims must comply with applicable expense requirements and include required supporting documentation.

24. Company Deductions and Recoveries

Authorized deductions or recoveries may be processed in accordance with employment terms, Company procedures, and applicable requirements.

Employees should raise questions about disputed deductions with HR or Finance promptly.

25. Benefits at Separation

Employee benefits may end, change, or become subject to continuation or conversion arrangements according to the applicable benefit plan and requirements.

HR should communicate relevant actions or documentation to the departing employee where applicable.

26. Insurance and Benefit Claims

Employees should submit eligible claims and complete required benefit actions before or after separation according to the applicable provider's rules.

The insurer or benefit administrator determines claim eligibility under the governing plan.

27. Exit Interview

TechNova may invite departing employees to participate in an exit interview.

The purpose may include understanding employee experience, identifying organizational improvements, and capturing appropriate feedback.

Participation and the information collected should be handled according to applicable Company procedures.

28. Employee Feedback

Employees may provide feedback concerning their employment experience, management, processes, workplace practices, or other relevant matters.

Feedback should be provided honestly and professionally.

29. Employment Verification

Requests for employment verification, reference information, or other official employment confirmations should be handled through the authorized HR process.

Employees should not make unauthorized official representations on behalf of TechNova.

30. Final Communication

HR may provide the departing employee with information concerning the last working day, final settlement, benefits, employment records, return of property, and other relevant exit matters.

31. Administrative Clearance

The Company may use an exit clearance process to confirm completion of required activities.

Function	Typical Clearance Items
Manager	Handover, projects, responsibilities, documentation

Function	Typical Clearance Items
IT	Devices, accounts, application and system access
Administration	Badge, keys, facilities property
Finance	Expenses, advances, recoveries, final financial items
HR	Exit documentation, benefits, employment records

32. Retirement

Employees approaching retirement should follow the applicable HR process for retirement notification, benefits, documentation, handover, and final settlement.

33. Redundancy and Organizational Changes

Where employment ends because of redundancy, restructuring, or another organizational change, TechNova will follow applicable Company procedures, employment terms, and legal requirements.

HR will communicate relevant separation arrangements to affected employees.

34. Company-Initiated Termination

Company-initiated termination will be handled through authorized HR and management processes.

The timing and scope of access closure, property recovery, communication, and other exit activities may differ from a voluntary resignation depending on the circumstances.

35. Immediate Separation

For certain security, conduct, operational, or other circumstances, the Company may require immediate cessation of access or work responsibilities, subject to applicable requirements.

IT and relevant functions may take immediate protective actions to safeguard Company systems and information.

36. Data Protection During Exit

Employee information collected during separation should be handled securely and accessed only by authorized personnel with a legitimate business need.

Exit records should be retained according to the Company's applicable records-management requirements.

37. Legal and Regulatory Obligations

Exit processes must comply with applicable employment, payroll, benefits, privacy, records, and other legal or regulatory requirements.

Where a legal requirement differs from a general internal process, the applicable requirement will prevail.

38. Non-Retaliation

Employees must not be subjected to retaliation for raising a good-faith workplace concern or participating appropriately in an authorized process before, during, or after separation.

39. Disputes and Concerns

Employees who have questions or concerns about their exit process should raise them with HR or another designated Company channel.

TechNova will review concerns according to applicable procedures and requirements.
