Policy Owner	Human Resources
Approving Authority	Executive Management
Classification	Internal — Employee Access
Version	1.0
Effective Date	01 April 2026
Review Cycle	Annual
Status	Active
Supersedes	New Policy

1. Purpose

This policy establishes the requirements governing approved work from home (WFH), remote work, and hybrid work arrangements at TechNova Solutions Pvt. Ltd. (“TechNova” or “the Company”).

The policy is intended to provide flexibility where operationally practical while maintaining productivity, collaboration, information security, customer service, employee accountability, and appropriate workplace standards.

Working remotely is a work arrangement and not an entitlement that overrides business requirements, role responsibilities, or applicable Company policies.

2. Scope

This policy applies to eligible TechNova employees who are approved to perform some or all of their duties away from a designated Company workplace.

It applies to temporary remote arrangements, recurring hybrid arrangements, and approved fully remote arrangements.

Contractors, consultants, interns, and trainees may be subject to separate contractual or program-specific requirements.

3. Definitions

- Work From Home (WFH): Performing assigned work from an approved residential or other authorized location.
- Remote Work: Performing work away from a regular Company office under an approved arrangement.
- Hybrid Work: A working arrangement combining approved office attendance and remote work.
- Primary Workplace: The Company-designated office or workplace associated with the employee's role.
- Approved Remote Location: A location declared or approved for remote work and suitable for Company work.
- Core Collaboration Hours: The agreed period during which employees are expected to be available for meetings and team collaboration.

4. Eligibility

Remote or hybrid work may be considered where the employee's role can be performed effectively without requiring continuous physical presence.

Eligibility may depend on:

- Nature of the role and responsibilities
- Customer and project requirements
- Information-security classification of the work
- Employee performance and reliability
- Team collaboration requirements
- Availability of suitable Company equipment and connectivity
- Operational coverage
- Manager and HR approval where required

Eligibility does not guarantee approval. Certain roles may require regular or full-time physical presence because of operational, security, customer, facility, equipment, or other requirements.

5. Standard Hybrid Arrangement

Unless a department has an approved alternative arrangement, eligible employees may be considered for a standard hybrid schedule of up to three remote working days per week, with remaining working days at the designated workplace.

The exact schedule is determined by the employee's role, team requirements, manager, customer commitments, and department operating model.

Managers may establish common office days for collaboration, planning, training, or customer activities.

6. Remote Work Approval

Employees must receive approval before beginning a recurring WFH or hybrid arrangement.

6.1 Request Process

- Employee discusses the proposed arrangement with the manager.
- Employee identifies the requested schedule, working location, and expected duration.
- Manager evaluates role suitability, team coverage, customer requirements, performance, and security considerations.
- HR involvement is obtained where required by the arrangement or Company procedure.
- Approved arrangements are recorded through the designated Company process.
- Employees must not assume approval based solely on an informal conversation.

7. Temporary WFH

A manager may approve temporary WFH for legitimate short-term circumstances where the employee can continue to perform duties effectively.

Examples may include temporary travel disruption, home maintenance, short-term personal circumstances, or operational requirements.

Temporary WFH should not be used to avoid approved leave when the employee is unable to work.

8. Fully Remote Arrangements

Fully remote employment arrangements may be approved for selected roles and employees when business requirements permit.

Such arrangements must be documented and may specify the approved work location, working hours, travel expectations, equipment, security requirements, and review conditions.

The Company may require a fully remote employee to attend an office, customer location, training event, or Company meeting when reasonably required by the role.

9. Approved Work Location

Employees must perform remote work from a location that is reasonably suitable for confidential and productive business activity.

Employees should notify the manager or HR if they intend to work from a materially different location for an extended period.

Remote work from another country may require prior approval because of legal, tax, security, employment, customer, and data-transfer considerations.

10. Working Hours and Availability

Remote employees remain subject to their approved working schedule. The standard full-time schedule remains 40 hours per week unless the employee's arrangement specifies otherwise.

- Employees must be reachable through approved communication channels during required working hours.
- Employees must attend scheduled meetings and customer commitments.
- Employees should maintain calendar availability accurately.
- Employees must communicate significant connectivity or power problems promptly.
- Remote work does not permit employees to become unavailable without approval.

11. Core Collaboration Hours

Teams may establish core collaboration periods during which employees are expected to be available for meetings, coordination, and customer activity.

Managers should provide reasonable notice of recurring core hours and account for approved leave and time-zone arrangements.

12. Productivity and Performance

Performance expectations remain the same regardless of whether work is performed remotely or from an office.

Employees are responsible for:

- Completing assigned work within agreed timelines
- Maintaining reasonable communication
- Meeting quality standards
- Attending required meetings
- Escalating blockers promptly
- Maintaining accurate work status
- Protecting Company information

Managers should evaluate performance based on outcomes, responsibilities, quality, collaboration, and other legitimate job-related factors rather than physical presence alone.

13. Communication Standards

- Use approved Company collaboration and communication systems.
- Keep status information reasonably current.
- Respond to urgent business communication within expected timeframes.
- Use video or audio meetings when required for effective collaboration.
- Document important decisions and actions in appropriate Company systems.
- Use professional communication standards in remote interactions.

14. Information Security

Remote employees must comply with all Company information-security requirements. Remote work must not reduce the level of protection applied to Company information.

- Use Company-approved devices and systems.
- Use approved secure connections and authentication mechanisms.
- Protect passwords and authentication factors.
- Lock devices when unattended.
- Prevent unauthorized persons from viewing Company information.
- Do not use public or shared computers for restricted Company work.
- Report suspected security incidents immediately.
- Do not transfer restricted data to unauthorized personal storage or applications.

15. Confidentiality in the Home Environment

Employees must take reasonable steps to prevent family members, visitors, roommates, service personnel, or other unauthorized individuals from viewing or hearing confidential Company information.

Employees should position screens appropriately, use headphones when necessary, secure printed documents, and avoid discussing sensitive matters in public or shared environments.

16. Device and Equipment

The Company may provide eligible employees with equipment required to perform their duties.

Employees are responsible for protecting assigned equipment from loss, theft, damage, unauthorized access, and misuse.

Company equipment remains Company property unless formally transferred through an authorized process.

- Employees must not permit unauthorized individuals to use Company devices.
- Employees must report lost or stolen equipment immediately.
- Employees must not disable security controls.
- Equipment must be returned when requested or upon separation.

17. Internet and Connectivity

Employees working remotely are responsible for maintaining reasonably reliable internet connectivity suitable for their role unless the Company has approved an alternative arrangement.

Employees should notify their manager promptly when connectivity issues materially affect work.

Where business continuity requires it, employees may be asked to work from a Company office or another approved location.

18. Power and Environmental Disruptions

Employees should maintain a practical contingency plan for temporary power or environmental interruptions where reasonably possible.

If an interruption prevents productive work, the employee should notify the manager and follow the agreed contingency process.

19. Home Office Standards

Employees are expected to maintain a work environment that supports reasonable productivity, confidentiality, and safety.

- A stable work surface and suitable seating
- Reasonable privacy for confidential work
- Adequate lighting
- Secure placement of Company equipment
- Safe electrical connections
- A work environment reasonably free from avoidable disruption

20. Health and Safety

Employees remain responsible for following applicable safety practices while working remotely. The Company may provide guidance regarding ergonomic setup, workstation safety, and incident reporting.

Employees should report work-related accidents or safety concerns through the appropriate Company process.

21. Meetings and Office Attendance

Employees on hybrid arrangements may be required to attend the office for team meetings, planning sessions, training, customer activities, audits, workshops, or other legitimate business needs.

Where practical, managers should provide reasonable notice for additional office attendance.

22. Business Travel

Remote status does not eliminate business-travel requirements. Employees may be required to travel to customer sites, Company offices, training locations, or other approved business locations.

23. Expenses

WFH does not automatically create an entitlement to reimbursement for home internet, electricity, furniture, utilities, or other personal expenses.

Any reimbursable remote-work expenses must be specifically authorized under the applicable expense policy or approved program.

24. Data Printing and Physical Records

Employees should minimize printing of confidential information while working remotely.

Where printing is necessary, employees must protect documents from unauthorized access and dispose of them using an approved secure method.

25. Use of Personal Devices

Personal devices should not be used for restricted or confidential Company work unless specifically approved and configured according to Company security requirements.

Approval may be withdrawn if a device no longer meets security or operational requirements.

26. Public Locations

Employees should avoid performing sensitive work from public locations where confidential information may be exposed.

Public Wi-Fi, shared workspaces, transportation areas, cafes, and similar environments require particular care. Employees should use approved security controls and avoid exposing confidential conversations or screens.

27. Cross-Border Remote Work

Working remotely from outside the employee's approved country or employment location requires prior written approval.

Approval may involve HR, Legal, Finance, Information Security, or management depending on the circumstances.

Employees must not assume that temporary travel authorization automatically permits remote work from another country.

28. Changes to Approved Arrangement

Employees should request changes to their approved working pattern through the designated process.

A manager may modify an arrangement when business needs, performance, security, customer requirements, or team operating conditions materially change.

29. Revocation or Suspension

The Company may suspend or revoke remote-work approval when necessary.

Reasons may include:

- Material decline in performance or reliability
- Repeated availability problems
- Security or confidentiality concerns
- Customer requirements
- Changes in role responsibilities
- Operational staffing needs
- Repeated failure to follow the policy
- Misuse of remote-work privileges

Where appropriate, the manager and HR should communicate the reason, effective date, and any transition requirements.

30. Attendance and Leave

Remote employees must comply with the Attendance Policy and Leave Policy.

If an employee is unable to work due to illness or another qualifying circumstance, the employee must use the applicable leave process rather than treating leave as ordinary WFH.

31. Monitoring and Records

The Company may maintain records of approved work arrangements, attendance, access, security events, and other business information where necessary for legitimate operational, security, compliance, or administrative purposes.

Any monitoring will be conducted according to applicable Company requirements and law.

32. Manager Responsibilities

- Evaluate remote-work requests consistently.
- Ensure appropriate team coverage.
- Communicate office and collaboration expectations.
- Monitor outcomes and performance.
- Escalate security or conduct concerns.
- Coordinate changes with HR where required.
- Apply the policy consistently across comparable situations.

33. Employee Responsibilities

- Follow the approved schedule and location.
- Remain reachable during required hours.
- Maintain a suitable and secure workspace.
- Protect Company equipment and information.
- Attend required office and customer activities.
- Report incidents, outages, or security concerns promptly.
- Obtain approval before materially changing the arrangement.

34. Exceptions

Exceptions may be approved by authorized management and HR representatives where permitted. Security, legal, customer, and regulatory restrictions may prevent certain exceptions.

Any approved exception should be documented with its scope and duration.

35. Policy Violations

Failure to comply with this policy may result in corrective action. Serious violations involving security, confidentiality, falsification, or unauthorized access may be escalated under the applicable disciplinary or security process.

36. Frequently Asked Questions

Can every employee work from home?

No. Eligibility depends on role, business requirements, security considerations, performance, and operational feasibility.

How many remote days can I take?

A standard hybrid arrangement may allow up to three remote working days per week, subject to approval and department requirements.

Can I work remotely from another country?

Only with prior approval. Cross-border remote work may involve HR, Legal, Finance, Information Security, and management review.

Does WFH change my working hours?

No. Employees remain subject to their approved schedule and availability requirements.

Can I use my personal laptop?

Only where specifically approved and where required security controls are satisfied.

Will I be reimbursed for home internet?

Not automatically. Reimbursement requires authorization under the applicable expense policy or approved program.

Can my manager require me to come to the office?

Yes, where legitimate business, customer, collaboration, security, or operational requirements justify office attendance.

Can WFH approval be revoked?

Yes. The Company may suspend or revoke an arrangement when business, performance, security, or other legitimate requirements change.

37. Policy Administration

Human Resources owns this policy and reviews it at least annually or when significant changes to working practices, technology, security requirements, or business operations occur.

The latest approved version maintained in the official Company policy repository is the authoritative version.
